

Medical Radiation Technologist - Radiography

A Medical Radiation Technologist is a regulated health professional who uses radiation or electromagnetism to produce diagnostic images of a patient's body or who administers radiation to treat patients for certain medical conditions on the order of a physician or other authorized health professional.

Medical Radiation Technologists in Radiography can be employed in clinics, hospitals, or with the military. MRT's take diagnostic x-rays to aid physicians in the diagnosis of injury, illness, or disease.
