Give individuals living with cancer the opportunity to experience the benefits of exercise and healthy living.

A Wellness and Exercise Program
for Individuals living with Cancer

WE-Can Program Overview

WE-Can is a 10 week wellness and exercise program for individuals living with cancer.

The program offers:

- Supervision by certified exercise professionals
- Individualized exercise programs
- Safe, private, small group environment
- Positive social support network with others undergoing similar cancer treatment

WE-Can Program Components

1. Assessment and Individualized Program

Participants referred to the program will undergo a complete medical history and physical fitness assessment. Based on the results of this evaluation, a personalized exercise prescription will be developed for you.

2. Wellness and Exercise Program

The program offers cardio and strength training exercises, as well as group warm up, cool down, and stretching.

3. Educational Group Presentations

The WE-Can program offers sessions on topics such as the importance of physical activity, home-based exercise programs, and nutrition. In addition, a personalized dietary assessment and consultation is available for each participant.

4. Group Support

The program provides a supportive environment where you can share your experiences of cancer and treatment with others. Sharing with others can help reduce anxiety and develop new coping skills.

Who Can Join WE-Can?

The program is offered to patients of the Regional Cancer Care Northwest at Thunder Bay Regional Health Sciences Centre who are in active treatment or up to five years post treatment. A referral from your oncologist or primary care provider is required (please see attached referral form). An assessment will be conducted by program staff to determine your suitability for the program.

Where Does The Program Take Place?

The WE-Can program takes place at the Canada Games Complex in Thunder Bay. You will also be given guidance on activities that you can do at home.
